GLENDALE (LOS ANGELES POSTOFFICE), LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CAL., FRIDAY, MARCH 14, 1913

No. 47

WHY SHOULD GLENDALE ADOPT A CHARTER?

Glendale is essentially a city of homes. Homes inhabited by class of citizens who are morally and intellectually above the average and who desire to have a CLEAN CITY KEPT CLEAN, and this phrase is applicable to both its moral and its scenic effect.

The general expression appears to be that we should regulate our questions of moral conduct and all local issues as we see fit without interference from other communities or the state at large.

As we are governed at the present time, under the act in the General Law governing Sixth Class cities throughout the state we must of necessity be constantly at the mercy of a state legislature composed of representatives from various portions of the state, not one of whom has any connection with us or is familiar with our standard of citizenship.

They may be and no doubt are good men and true, but when passing an act to govern cities ranging from 500 to 6000 inhabitants (all of which are of the sixth class) scattered throughout our state, the very condition confronting them makes it necessary that the law must be of such a nature as to best meet the requirements of the many and not any particular one. Thus in regulating police powers or control of public utilities, the liquor question, the administrative policy etc., they legislate as in their judgment will strike a general average. Los Angeles now desires to extend its police jurisdiction two miles outside its city and the passing of such an act would place us under their jurisdiction as to all questions regulated by police commission.

The Constitution itself contemplated that each city control its own affairs to the greatest extent possible being confined only by the limits of the Constitution itself and thus provided that any city having a population of 3500 or more might adopt its own charter and thus avoid being under the constant change of legislative moods of representatives from the larger cities or from the mining and industrial districts of the state. The adoption of a charter is the grant of power to govern ourselves and I feel that there are few people in this community who do not feel that they are able to do so better than those who are distant from us.

The citizens of this community evidently felt the need of taking this power to themselves as per the privilege granted by the constitution when they elected from among their citizens fifteen men to draft a charter. This was done last September and among those we find two or three Socialists, several Democrats, Progressives and Stand Pat Republicans, men of all political and religious views. These fifteen representatives labored for three months, meeting several nights each week and holding each session open to the public and inviting counsel from all who would come to their meetings. At these meetings they had propositions submitted to them from various sources, they also had the charters of hundreds of other cities before them and finally adopted the various provisions now presented for our ratification.

There may be some provisions which you do not think are what you might have placed there, but it is quite within reason to believe that some measures which you might have drafted would not please all other citizens, but the charter does represent the best efforts of fifteen of our best citizens who made themselves conversant with the best charters of our country and submit to us this charter. This City is in need of a charter for local self government. If the charter submitted has a clause which does not read as you would have it read and a majority of the citizens agree with you, the charter can be amended to meet your ideas. Hoping the citizens of this community will not be misled by the efforts of some who desire to defeat the adoption of the charter merely because they have a whim of their own or because some idea of theirs is not embodied in the same, but that they will take up the question and solve it from the viewpoint of local self government and will here in only a very few words call your attention to some erroneous statements being circulated.

The law of our state provides a $1.00 per hundred tax levy for the General fund and that is the LIMIT as per the charter. No citizen knowing the laws of the state and familiar with the Charter will tell you anything other than this. No possibility for increased taxes, only through bonded indebtedness and you can contract such a debt now and in either case it is by a two-thirds vote of the citizens, not the council or mayor.

The charter provides a maximum life for franchise of 40 years while the present law governing us grants 50 years. The charter provides that the council must submit the question of granting a franchise to the voters for decision on petition of 15

BIRTHDAY DINNER

A very pleasant social event took place at the home of Mr. George bride-elect of William Livingstone, on Sunday, March 2, the occasion being a dinner in honor of the 85th birthday of his mother, Mrs. Luther Smith. There were present Mr. and Mrs. Bishop of Inglewood, Mrs. Olds of Long Beach and Miss Olds of Los Angeles. Mrs. Smith though eighty-five years old, is remarkably young appearing for her age. She has good health physically and is mentally strong and highly enjoyed the dinner given in her honor. Such occasions are happy ones and will be long remembered.

EXPLAIN OXYLINE MACHINE

Last Friday evening Dr. C. C. Curtis attended the meeting of a medical society in Los Angeles and while there was invited to tell the forty who were there about his Oxyline machine and how he used it in the treatment of diseases and the kind of patients he is curing with it. As none of those present owned one of these machines they were glad to learn of its beneficial results. Surely the citizens of Glendale are to be congratulated that one of these Oxyline machines is in so small a city and that they who are not well may have the use of it. One of these physicians who was present last Friday evening sent a patient here today that she might have the use of the health-giving machine.

ORCHARD HEATING

The report comes from Ventura county that out of an estimated production of 500 cars of lemons for this year, 394 cars are saved and will be shipped. This excellent showing is due to the successful smudging in the greater part of the bearing lemon groves of the county. The estimate for oranges is practically the same.

The citizens of Pomona are investigating improved methods of orchard heating and a committee of nine representing the Pomona Council, the Fruit Growers' Protective Association, the Board of Trade and the business men have finished their work and will make a report at a meeting to be held some time this spring. The committee on oils and heating pots will make reports at the same time.

THE LEGISLATURE

On Monday last, March 10th, the state legislature reconvened at Sacramento. During the interim of one month intervening between the first and second halves of the session the members of the legislature and their constituents have been busily engaged in the study of proposed laws. With respect to many of the bills, and in various localities, the study has been carried on in a systematic and painstaking manner. It may be assumed that every interest in the state, business, professional and social, has had full hearing. Much light has been thrown on the more important proposals. Legislators seem unanimous in declaring that the experience of the past month have been of great value to them. While the date of adjournment sine die has not been fixed, there appears to be a purpose to expedite business as much as possible. It is believed the second session will continue not longer than forty days. A number of members calculate the time at thirty days.

PYLE FAMILY REUNION

A very delightful occasion was the reunion held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pyle, 1116 Chestnut St., on Thursday, March 6, when all members of the family with the exception of one son, met together for the first time in fifteen years, the following members of the family were present: Mrs. Wm. Christy of Colorado Springs, Col.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pyle of Dallas, Hl.; Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Pyle and daughter of Pasadena; C. G. Pyle, wife and two children and Mr. John C. Pyle. Mr. Pyle has been an invalid for some time and this meeting of the family was a happy event for him as well as for all concerned.

per cent of the voters, while the present law demands 25 per cent. The charter demands in passing a franchise, see Sec. 4, Art. 11, that before the council can pass it, the same must be published two consecutive weeks, then lay over NOT LESS than 20 days before further action; then a week elapses between first and final readings and another fifteen days before it becomes effective, making a total of at least 56 days elapsing from the notice to the people of the proposed ordinance and its final passage during all of which time it is subject to the referendum. Our present law provides that the council first grant the franchise and then notify the people that it has been passed, by publication. So we might take one question after another.

TEA PARTY AND SHOWER

Miss Pearle Good of Glendale, bride-elect of William Livingstone, was the complimented guest at a delightful combination tea party and handkerchief shower given on Saturday afternoon by Miss Juanita Stack of Westmoreland Place, Los Angeles, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Dr. D. C. Campbell.

Beautiful decorations of spring blossoms adorned the handsome parlors where a pleasant afternoon of games and music was passed.

Five o'clock tea was served at a table, quaintly decorated in pink.

Sailing in a sea of pink hearts was a ship (presumably the court ship) the sails of which were a number of very handsome handkerchiefs, while the hold was loaded with others equally as valuable. Miss Good was given the seat of honor and invited to unload the cargo.

Individual favors were tiny statuettes of Psyche and Cupid. Hand painted place cards in pink marked covers for the following invited guests: Miss Emily Elias of Tropico, Miss Briar Tarante of Los Angeles, Miss Nora Poore of Whittier, Miss Bess Fretwell of Los Angeles, Miss Ethel Joyce of Los Angeles, Mrs. Kirtz Kelley, Miss Rowena Green, Miss Lorraine Mitchell, Miss George Duffet and Miss Alpha Clement of Glendale.

JUNIOR CLASS BENEFIT

On Friday evening the numerous friends and patrons of the Junior class gathered in the Glendale High school to witness the Junior class benefit. The stage had been made a bower of golden acacia from which the numbers of an unusually excellent program were heard and appreciated by a very large and appreciative audience. Number after number was repeated encored and re-enforced.

The committee in charge, Jim Henry Ilse and Arthur Knight deserves much commendation for the following program which comprised the evening's entertainment:

CHINESE PIRATE SMUGGLER JUNK

Old "Ning-Po," the 158-year-old Chinese pirate-smuggler junk, now anchored at Venice after a voyage of 160 days from Shanghai to San Pedro, is suffering from the sins of her youth. Like a whole lot of people with a "past," the old ship whose decks have often run red with blood, so it is veraciously asserted, finds it very hard to live down her century old deeds of cruelty and cowardice and to take on a new character even amidst the frivolous crowds that go down to Venice.

The last person in the world to overlook and forget a "reputation" is Uncle Sam. One would hardly expect the watchful old gentleman to extend his gaze to a poor old Chinese junk, once a vigorous young criminal but now old and reformed. But Your Uncle never forgets. "Keep them good by watching them," and "Reforms are merely temporary" are some of his mottoes. So the customs department has set a keen-eyed sleuth to watch the old "Ning-Po" to see that she does nothing that a real reformed "bad" ship should not do.

Old "Ning-Po" can't change her berth, not even a few feet without letting Uncle Sam's representative know she wants to move, and then paying $1.06 a ton for the privilege of moving. This is sad for the owners of the battle-scarred veteran of a century and a half, and it is humiliating to a reformed ship. But there you are.

As the custom officer at Venice says when he tires of sitting on the wharf and watching the old smuggler as she nods to the quiet swell of the Pacific, "She ain't got no country and no flag or nothing, so you can't tell what she might do. I guess she is tame enough but we ain't taking no chances. Her reputation is too bad."

Meanwhile "Ning-Po" welcomes visitors to her "blood-scarred" decks, as the spieler puts it, and smiles at Uncle Sam's man.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB LUNCHEON

One of the most enjoyable and best attended events of the year given by the Tuesday Afternoon club was the luncheon at Masonic hall last Tuesday, Mrs. Dan Campbell, chairman of the program committee, being the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Charles Homer Temple, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones and Mrs. E. C. Frank.

At 12:30 o'clock, the hour set for the luncheon approached, the hall presented a brilliant scene. The long tables beautifully decorated in the colors of the Emerald Isle and the various emblems of St. Patrick's Day, were filled to overflowing with the choicest products of Sunny California converted into cooked dainties by the skillful Glendale club women.

After a few introductory remarks by Mrs. Campbell, she suggested the singing of "Praise God from whom All Blessings Flow," thereby giving a proper reverence to the occasion.

At the conclusion of the luncheon a general mingling of the members and guests followed and a social time was enjoyed.

Mrs. W. C. Musket, president of the District Federation, honored the occasion by her presence and addressed the audience with a few remarks on pertinent subjects, commanding the spirit of hospitality shown by this club and the gratifying progress made in its different sections, laying particular stress, however on the desirability of a club owning and occupying its own clubhouse, thereby giving a better status to the same.

The members of the Matinee Musical club of Los Angeles gave the following exceedingly interesting program:

Trio — (a) "Warum" Schuman "Traumerie" Schuman Saxophone — Mrs. F. Junquist.

Piano — Mrs. Hernando C. Lee.

Vocal — "Maido de Cadiz" Delibes Mrs. Eugene E. Davis

Piano — "Rapsodies No. 2" Brahms Mrs. Hernando C. Lee.

Trio — Serenade V. Herbert

Violin — Mrs. Harry Underwood.

Saxophone — Mrs. F. Junquist.

Piano — Mrs. Hernando C. Lee.

Vocal — "Joy to the Morning" Ware Mrs. Eugene E. Davis.

Dance — Zilla Withrow

Violin — "Meditation" (Thais) Massenet

Mrs. Harry Underwood

The following delegates were appointed to the district federation at Monrovia on March 26-28: Mrs. R. E. Chase and Mrs. C. E. Hutchinson; Alternates: Mrs. Helen Campbell and Mrs. Charles L. Evans.

The next meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon Club will be Philanthropic Day March 25th, in charge of Mrs. L. W. Sinclair.

The downward curve allows twenty-four minutes between 30 and 35 years, and eighteen minutes between the ages of 35 to 40. Finally between 50 and 60 the elderly woman finds six minutes enough to study her reflection.

The figures for a lifetime reach the total of 349,575 minutes, or more than 242 days.

NOBLE WOMAN CALLED TO REST

Mrs. Lucy Anna Elliott was born in New York state and passed to her eternal rest at Glendale, Cal., 718 North Louise St., March 9, 1913.

She spent her childhood in Pennsylvania, where she received an academic education. She was a very successful teacher for many years in Pennsylvania and New York state. On June 12, 1866, she was married to L. E. Elliott in Nebraska City, Neb., and soon thereafter they moved to Johnson county, Iowa, where she spent the most of her married life. To Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were born three sons and a daughter all of whom are alive and have ever been an honor and a joy to their parents.

Mrs. Elliott was a great lover of property and children. She made a kindergarten of her home, never allowing the children to enter public schools until eight or nine years old. She was public spirited and generous in everything pertaining to the welfare of the neighborhood in which she lived. As a neighbor she was kindly and helpful, as a wife she was pure gold and as a mother she was a diamond that lighted every heart around the hearth. Although always a woman of delicate health there was no day too long or task too hard for the compassing of the comfort of her dear ones. She was a constant Christian and did effective work for the church and the uplift of humanity wherever her lot was cast. The last eight years of her life were spent in Beautiful Glendale. Her active work there was to give her time and substantial aid to the foundation of a mission church at Casa Verdugo. She was a great sufferer the last two years of her life and a merciful release has come to her. We know that she sits at the right hand of Him who went to prepare a place for her. May we all meet her there.

SACRED CONCERT A SUCCESS

The sacred concert given last Sunday at the Auditorium was a delight to all music lovers. The selections from "Elijah," sung by ten notable artists, all well known locally proved especially pleasing.

Glendale was again represented by Mrs. Edmund S. Shank, of whom Glendale residents are justly proud, who sang in the angel's chorus. The popularity of "The Holy City," was demonstrated once more when it was so well played by Mr. V. Toohey, first cornetist of the People's orchestra. The orchestra in "Marche Religieuse," by Gounod was excellent.

The soloists on the program for next Sunday are Mr. J. P. Dupuy, tenor, who will sing an aria from "Carmen," and Mr. Axel Simonsen, cellist, who will play a concerto with orchestral accompaniment. Two numbers are to be repeated by request: the

CHAPTER II.

After the Ball.

No such concern seemed to hold Edward Thornton back. He was here, there and everywhere, overlooking if anything the role of "the life of the party" and never missing a ball.

Suddenly the colonel's beautiful wife, flanked by the two vivacious girls, and herself looking the picture of health and radiance in a specially modish ball gown of flowered satin, sailed into the salon like the star of a stage play. It was the official, formal opening of the ball!

"Do you know what Mrs. Pinckney says?" Gertrude Ellingham asked Lieutenant Kerchival West. "She has invited a party of friends to her house to witness the firing on Sumter."

"How delightful!" responded Kerchival, in rather a forced tone of gaiety. "I hope, however, that they won't wait for breakfast until the fortress is bombarded."

"You think it will be a long wait? Well, Lieutenant West, I'll bet you an embroidered cigar case against a box of gloves that the first gun is fired before sunrise."

"Done. You will lose the bet, Miss Gertrude, unless Major Ruffin, unable to curb his patience any longer, should steal out and touch off a mortar on his own hook. Not that I shouldn't be overjoyed to offer you the gloves, particularly if—well, in the hope that that one of the little hands belonging inside them shall!"

They were in the shadow of the oleanders as he spasmodically seized one of the aforesaid little hands. She withdrew it almost as promptly, murmuring:

"Shall remain in my own keeping for the present until some one comes along who has a good excuse for claiming it. So you don't believe that General Beauregard is going to open fire on Sumter this morning?"

"No; of course not."

"Well, I happen to know that everything is in readiness."

"It is a heap easier to have everything in readiness to do a thing than it is to do it. For instance, I have been ready a dozen times today to say to you, Miss Gertrude, that—that I—" Well, sir?"

"But I didn't, you know."

"Very likely General Beauregard has more nerve than you have."

"Oh, it is easy enough to set a few batteries around Charleston harbor. But when it comes to firing the first shot at woman!"

"At a woman! Why, what are you talking about?"

"I mean at the American flag. A man must be a—must have the nerves of—"

"You northern men are so slow!"

"Yes, I know I've been slow, but I assure you, Miss Gertrude, that my heart—"

"Aren't you going north to join in the threatened invasion of our southern Confederate states?"

"Yes, that's our orders, I believe."

"You are ready to fight against my friends, against my own brother, your country at all. I belong to the north!"

"And I am a southern woman. There the fatal line is drawn."

Here Thornton and Jenny Buckthorn came up.

"I'm glad the attack on Sumter is to be made at last," declared Thornton. "I do not share your pleasure in that prospect," said a serious voice over Gertrude's shoulder. It was that of her brother, Lieutenant Robert Ellingham.

"And you a southern gentleman?" retorted Thornton, with the customary shade of insolence.

"And you, a northern—gentleman?"

With the reluctant accent Bob gave to the word "gentleman" it actually seemed to be in quotation marks with an interrogation point after it.

"I am a southerner by choice. I shall join the cause," said Thornton curtly.

"We can take care of our own rights, sir. They will be safe in our keeping, even if you should not find it to your interest to run risks in our behalf."

"You'll find me ready for any risk you like," muttered Thornton, turning on his heel.

At the same moment Colonel Haverill, who had not participated in the dancing, approached from the direction of his wife's apartment. He held in his hand a white silk handkerchief, which he immediately offered to Lieutenant West, who took it, glanced at the initials—his own—thanked his superior officer and passed out to the veranda overlooking the lawn, where many colored lanterns twinkled. Here, almost as if by preconcerted arrangement, Mrs. Haverill joined him a moment later.

"Madam," said the young man, with embarrassed solicitude. "I beg to tell you how happy I am to see that your indisposition has vanished—also to offer humble apologies for my awkwardness and helplessness when I undertook to rush to your aid. You can always depend upon me to act the part of an idiot in such an emergency. Fortunately I was able to find Miss Gertrude and my sister and send them to you in time to be of real service. Colonel Haverill has just handed me back my handkerchief."

"Oh, thank you, Lieutenant, for everything. I suppose my husband had been to my room looking for me. Something came up today that has upset us both a bit. And it is in regard to that matter that I wish to ask you to do me a favor—a great service. Will you?"

"Pray command me, Mrs. Haverill," answered Kerchival with his heart thumping in wild, wondering excitement.

"It is about the colonel son, Frank. You know the trouble he has got into in New York. He has escaped arrest, and I have just received word that he is here in Charleston. I am the only one he can turn to. His father is stern and uncompromising in his humiliation. I want you to find Frank and arrange for me to meet him as soon as possible, if you can do it with safety. I shall give you a letter for him. I should like you to take it at daylight if possible. It is a sad errand, and I know of none but yourself whom I can trust with it."

Lieutenant Kerchival West bowed profoundly.

comrade. If that don't make us enemies what does?"

"Nothing can make me your enemy, Gertrude. My services belong to my

"I will get ready at once," he said. "I can change my clothes in five minutes."

How he welcomed this spur to action! The ball had ended for him at the last words of Gertrude.

He kept his word within the five minutes specified and came back booted and spurred to report to the colonel's wife. She was not where he had left her, but he heard her low, earnest voice at the other end of the shadowed veranda.

"If my husband knew," Mrs. Haverill's voice was saying, "he would kill you, Edward Thornton, unless you treacherously took advantage and shot him down without remorse. You know I am innocent. I never gave you any hint of encouragement, and the last I remember you were crouching before me like a whipped cur. But I have kept the secret, and you must. Avoid meeting Colonel Haverill before we leave Charleston."

"You have my apology," whispered Thornton.

"That is not what I have asked." "Do you mean by that that you will not accept amends?"

"For my husband's sake," the woman pleaded.

"Ah, your anxiety on his account, madam, makes me feel that perhaps, after all, my offense is indeed unpardonable. What an absurd blunder for a gentleman to make. If I hadn't supposed it was Lieutenant Kerchival West who was my rival!"

"What do you mean, sir?"

"But instead it is your husband who stands between us."

"How dare you, sir!" cried the exasperated lady, now on the verge of hysterics. "Let me tell you that whatever I may wish to spare my husband he fears nothing for himself. But, no; I entreat of you do not let this horrible affair go any further."

Kerchival West, having no choice but to overhear, was of the same mind. He now stepped forward decisively, saying:

"Pardon me. I hope I am not interrupting. I believe, Mrs. Haverill, you have an errand for me?"

"Yes," she exclaimed eagerly. "Thank you so much. I will go and write the note immediately. Pray excuse me, Mr. Thornton."

Without another word she hastened away. The two men bowed and waited in silence until she was out of sight and hearing. Then Kerchival West drew himself up and said quietly:

"Thornton, you are a d—d scoundrel. Do I make myself plain?"

"You have made it plain all along that you are looking for a quarrel. I've no objection. Still, I prefer to pick my own adversaries."

"Colonel Haverill is my commander," said West, trembling with suppressed excitement. "He is beloved by every officer in the regiment."

"Well, what authority does that give you?"

"His honor is our honor. His wife—"

"Oho, that's it, eh? So, you have a first class license to act as Mrs. Haverill's champion. I have heard that her favorite officer!"

Kerchival approached a step nearer.

"You dare to suggest!"

"If I accept your challenge," sneered the other, "I shall do so not because you are her protector or the protector of her husband's honor, but as my rival. We stand on even ground."

"Cur, you listen to me now!" and Kerchival emphasized his words with a slash of his riding whip full in Thornton's face.

"I think you are entitled to my attention, sir," responded the other, recovering himself quickly.

"My time here is short, as you know," Kerchival said.

"Long enough for my purpose. I reckon. The bayou—the Ashley a mile or so—is a convenient place. In an hour from now it will be light enough to sight our weapons."

"I'll be there in half an hour with a friend!" cried Kerchival.

Nobody in Charleston slept that night of April 11-12. At the Ellingham house, as at Pinckney's, and at many another home of luxury and pride there were festive or other gatherings which kept people up and about until past midnight.

Then in the early hours of that fatal Friday an exchange of rocket signals between Forts Johnson and Moultrie began. Every one knew what that meant. The men, some of them without stopping to change their evening clothes, disappeared with strange, silent, ominous alacrity. The women huddled in whispering groups or brought spyglasses and from outdoor points of vantage watched intently across the dark waters to where the flagstaff of Sumter, like a warning finger, pointed solemnly to the stars in the balmy dusk of the southern springtime sky.

The abrupt departure of Thornton and Lieutenant West and Ellingham, accompanied, as it appeared, by Dr. Ellingham and one or two of the young men in uniform, had not failed to attract attention and excite comment. Mrs. Haverill, by discreet inquiry among the household servants, obtained a startling hint or two which she hastened to communicate in confidence to Kerchival—none else.

"There are tears in your eyes, Gertrude," said Mrs. Haverill sympathetically.

"They have no right there," returned the girl, with a pitiful flash of the old spirit that contrasted with the scared look on her unswayed pale face.

"I am afraid I know—not what has happened to Lieutenant West in those last few minutes, but—forgive a woman who has had more experience than you have, dear, and who is fond of you—what happened between you and him when you were together for the last time, maybe, in—who knows how long?"

"I have told you he and his unfortunate wife are provided for. Why should you see him? I shall not."

"At least I had thought to convey a fate-poor you, if it must, but not a quarrel. What is pride or coquetry at such a moment?"

"Another rocket," cried Madeline West, ditting from somewhere in the outer darkness. "Does any one know where Rob—I mean where Lieutenant Ellingham is? He excused himself for a minute and he has been gone an hour and a half. He promised to be here before."

He kept his word within the five minutes specified and came back booted and spurred to report to the colonel's wife. She was not where he had left her, but he heard her low, earnest voice at the other end of the shadowed veranda.

"If my husband knew," Mrs. Haverill's voice was saying, "he would kill you, Edward Thornton, unless you treacherously took advantage and shot him down without remorse. You know I am innocent. I never gave you any hint of encouragement, and the last I remember you were crouching before me like a whipped cur. But I have kept the secret, and you must. Avoid meeting Colonel Haverill before we leave Charleston."

"So did Lieutenant West," Mrs. Haverill joined in with undisguised anxiety.

Boom, came a loud, sullen, reverberating report from over the bay.

"Look!" screamed Gertrude Ellingham, jumping up in a frenzy of excitement. "Did you see that line of fire against the sky? That was no rocket—that was a shell. It has struck the fort!"

At the same instant there was a loud clatter of horses' hoofs outside and Bob Ellingham dashed up the front steps.

"Rufin has fired the shot!" he cried, throwing his cap into the air. "Hark! there goes another one. They have opened fire on Sumter, sure enough!"

"Where is Mr. West? Mr. Thornton?" The doctor?" demanded the three women, all in a breath.

"They are—Anderson doesn't reply—that's what I rode back ahead to tell you. It's all right. The second shot hit Thornton, and Kerchival hasn't a scratch. He'll be along with the doctor directly. Rufin swore he would fire the first."

"For heaven's sake, Robert, what are you talking about?" pleaded Gertrude, seizing him by the arm. "Do try and compose yourself and tell us what has happened. You say that?"

"Kerchival and Thornton had it out. I tell you. Beauregard has 3,000 or 4,000 men under arms, and it's a chance if Anderson can muster hundred. Well, as I was saying, they met in the gardens down at the bayou. Sam Pinckney and myself loaded the weapons, a pair of regulation navy sixes. Then we tossed up a silver dollar for choice of position at ten paces, and Thornton won. But that made no difference, for the sun wasn't up yet."

"Mercy! Was it a duel?" Mrs. Haverill interjected.

"It certainly was, madam. Kerchival scored at the second fire. His bullet plowed through Thornton's cheek, branding him, but nothing dangerous. The doctor is with him, and old Kerchival is all right and coming along after me any minute. Well, that trifling affair is over and well over. Something more important has started. I thought you'd all be anxious to know that!"

"Madam, I have to beg your pardon for my unexpectedly prolonged absence and to report for orders."

This last was the voice of Kerchival, looking uncommonly pale and animated, addressing himself to Mrs. Haverill.

She grasped his hand without speaking and drew him aside.

"I can only say God bless you, Lieutenant West," she said, with quivering lips. "Some happier day I hope to thank you adequately and so will the colonel. He knows even less than I do at the present moment. But he knows that Frank has taken refuge here, and he will not see him or allow me to do so. You will take these to the poor boy won't you—this letter and this little packet? It is a sacred confidence, and I ask it, as I know you receive it, freely."

Kerchival bowed profoundly and was off in a second.

Mrs. Haverill's envoy to her stepson Frank had cost her another poignant scene with the colonel. Before the ball had ended and the excitement of Sumter fairly began, husband and wife had met in the seclusion of the lady's apartment.

"My Desdemona," he had said in more than half serious bantering, "I picked up Cassio's handkerchief here, and I have returned it to its owner. That is all very well, my girl, but what is this I hear about you having warmer message than that from his father."

Here the colonel paused a moment in silence and made his peculiar gesture of violently brushing something aside from before his face.

"Frank is a man now," he said at last.

"I couldn't trust myself to see him—and, anyway, he must now stand on his own pins. We all must, for these are desperate days and rebellious boys are not the only concern."

"He is here in Charleston."

"He ought to be in prison, I suppose."

"But to me he is nowhere."

"I am sending word to him: I may see him later. Have you no word for him?"

"I have told you he and his unfortunate wife are provided for. Why should you see him? I shall not."

"At least I had thought to convey a

FEW ROYAL ROADS NOWADAYS

Long ago the impossibility of finding an easier road to geometry for royal feet was explained to a prince. Geometry we now know to be without favor or fear; a plain and open pathway to prince or pauper. But today we still are hunting other "royal roads" and are daily finding only discouragements. And there must be discouragements in this search as long as we fail to recognize the truth in the case.

There is no fountain of youth, and we no longer search for it; there is no philosopher's stone, and we all know that. There is no royal road to health and efficiency and joy; the laws which govern these things are as immutable as are the laws of geometry or the facts of the multiplication table. It would be as easy to manipulate figures so that $5 \times 5 = 13$ as it would be to manipulate stimulants and narcotics into adding health to the body. It is simply an impossible thing to do, and the sooner we learn that lesson the better it will be for all of us.

There is a common road to geometry, and it is a pleasant road to travel. It is simply the pathway from one simple fact, honestly mastered, to the next simple fact, and so on until the truth of the proposition has been demonstrated. There is a common road to health, and it is simply the pathway which the cells of the body take as they are acted upon by good clean blood and the nerve impulses initiated by wholesome surroundings properly understood.

The search for a royal road led through mazes of useless finery and worthless gilding; the simpler road is the easy one. The search for cures has led patients through many and painful experiences, far from the simple pathway which is clean and pure and mostly comfortable. Greater pain follows the hiding of pain by anodynes; greater weakness follows the imitation of strength by stimulants.

The honestly mastered facts of living, the honest acceptance of the facts of life, the clear-eyed recognition of the relationships between bodily conditions, these are the signs posts which alone can point the way to physical vigor, to mental efficiency, and to as great a recovery as is possible when the body has been injured in any way.

There are few royal roads nowadays anywhere, and the common roads are much shorter, prettier, smoother and more advantageous every way. Then the royal roads do lead often to disaster; the common roads are more often safely followed.—Exchange.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

With the greatest care the housewife will occasionally spill a little grease on the kitchen floor. When possible, the best thing is immediately to pour over it cold water, and prevent it penetrating the wood. Scrape off all that is possible, rub thickly with soap, and wash off with boiling water. When dry, fold thickness of brown wrapping paper, lay over the spot, and place on it a hot smoothing iron; this will draw much of the grease into the paper; then wash again with soap and hot water. This will take out so much of the spot that it will hardly be noticed if daily washed off as it draws out of the wood, for every article has to come out at the top of the boards, and the more persistently one works at it, the sooner it will disappear.

The following is recommended as the best mode of cleaning gloves: Mix one-fourth ounce carbonate of ammonia, one-fourth ounce fluid chloroform, one-fourth ounce sulphuric ether, one quart distilled benzene. Pour out a small quantity in a saucer, pour on the gloves, and wash as if washing the hands, changing solution until gloves are clean; take off, squeeze them, replace on hands, and with a clean cloth rub fingers, etc., until they are dry and perfectly fitted to the hand. This cleaner is also an excellent clothes, ribbon and silk cleaner; is perfectly harmless to the most delicate tints. Apply with a soft sponge, rubbing gently until spots disappear; care must be taken not to use it near fire, as the benzine is very inflammable.

POTASH LANDS WITHDRAWN

The President has recently approved the withdrawal of three tracts of land of the desert-basin type in California and Nevada, that are believed, as the result of investigations by the United States Geological Survey, to contain valuable deposits of potassium salts and brines. The aggregate area thus withdrawn is 132,829 acres. The first of these withdrawals covered Columbus Marsh, Nevada, and was approved on January 16, 1913. The second included the famous Searles Lake, California, and was approved on February 21, 1913. The third included lands in the Panamint Valley, California, the acreage affected being 24,567 acres. Searles Lake is the last remaining pocket of a great ancient lake, which has dried up, thus concentrating a vast amount of saline minerals. Millions of tons of salt, soda, and borax fill the bottom of the lake, and the deposits of soda and borax have been worked, but the development of the potash in the lake deposits had not been considered until recently.

The bitter disputes, amounting almost to warfare, that have resulted from the attempts to secure title to the potassium-rich lands of Searles Lake since the discovery of potash there have not only resulted in the postponement of the highly desirable experimental work on the deposits themselves but have shown the utter inadequacy of the present laws for the acquisition of lands of this type. The bed of Searles Lake is blanketed with filings, the majority of which have been made under the general placer law providing that 160 acres may be entered as an association placer, but there is danger that the legality of these filings may be destroyed by agreements, made prior to patent, to combine a group of placers after patent is received, in order to obtain an area large enough to serve as a basis for a plant for extracting and refining the salts.

In short, the whole situation is clouded and perhaps legally irremediable under the present statutes. It is in recognition of this condition that the Presidential withdrawals have been made. They are in aid of legislation of a type that will give security of tenure and certainty in operation to whoever may desire to undertake development of these or other deposits. The withdrawals are not destructive of any valid claims that may exist. In fact in order that any rights heretofore lawfully initiated may be preserved the withdrawal order has been made to include the following phrase. "This withdrawal is made subject to all rights lawfully initiated under any valid mining locations made upon such lands so long as such rights are maintained in full compliance with the law."

The constructive good faith of the Government in the withdrawal of these lands in aid of legislation is indicated by the fact that concurrently with the withdrawal the Interior Department has prepared the draft of a law intended to relieve the present chaotic situation and provide a safe and sure legal basis for the development of the deposits now known and any that may be discovered in the future. This draft has been submitted to Congress for its consideration, and its enactment will be urged in order that American potash deposits may be developed under conditions that are favorable to the producer and will at the same time protect the consumer.

RICE PANCAKES

Sift together one pint of flour, one teaspoon sugar, a saltspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder sifted with the flour. Beat one egg thoroughly and stir it into a cup and a quarter of milk. Turn this on two cupfuls of cold boiled rice and beat with a fork until the rice is free from lumps. Add to the prepared flour and beat to a smooth batter. Have the griddle well heated and greased and cook the batter in large thin cakes, browning nicely on both sides. Serve with maple syrup, honey or thick fruit syrup.

MACARONI AND HAM

Break a half pound of macaroni into lengths; boil it until tender in hot salted water. Make white sauce of a tablespoon each of butter and flour and a cupful of milk. Put into this the macaroni and a cupful of cold boiled ham chopped fine and seasoned with a pinch of dry mustard and a little red pepper. Add a beaten egg and turn the mixture into a buttered pudding pan. Strew with bread crumbs and grated cheese over the top and bake, covered for half an hour, then uncover and brown.

THE RIGHT SHOP

Mrs. Newlywed: Is this the taxidermist? Man on the telephone: Yes ma'am. Mrs. Newlywed: You stuff birds, don't you?

Man: We sure do, Ma'am.

Mrs. Newlywed: Well, how much would you charge to come up here and stuff the turkey we're going to have for Thanksgiving dinner? I myself don't know how.

CADDY WAS DISGUSTED

A beginner at golf was on one occasion taking an unconscionable time to get around a seaside course at Edinburgh. Several holes had been played in a manner which produced a look of disgust in the face of the caddy. Getting badly bunkered the gentleman tried several clubs, one after the other, without success. Turning to his caddy he inquired, "What should I take now, boy?" To this the caddy promptly responded: "Ye should take the 4.25 back to Edinburgh."

MARY'S LAMB

The world has very many lambs, whose owner's names are hid. And yet these lambs grew wool as white as Mary's ever did. Of course the fame of Mary's lamb is not at all surprising. Was brought about by out-and-out persistent advertising.

DR. FRIEDMAN HAS COMMENCED TREATMENTS

The German bacteriologist who came to the United States to prove that he has a serum which will aid in the cure of tuberculosis, gave his first treatment to patients on this side of the Atlantic recently, to a woman and two men, at the People's Hospital, 103 Second avenue, New York City. Some of the 40 physicians who attended the clinic came out expressing frank disapproval of Dr. Friedman's training in bacteriology. Others denounced him angrily for selecting patients whose cases were, they said, not half tests of the serum. Others felt that all judgment should be suspended to await results.

With nearly all the hospitals barred to him with thousands of sufferers, frantically demanding that the use of the cure begin, the city menaced by scores of white plague victims arriving daily on trains from every part of the country, Dr. Friedman turned to the humble little East Side house of healing. The members of the house visiting staff and a few other physicians had been notified. Physicians connected with the hospital were requested to bring tuberculous patients.

Dr. Friedman finally selected a Miss Berger, of whom Dr. Sirovich said that she was convalescent and had a record of gaining five pounds a month for some time; a Mr. Stiegel, 40 years old, and a young relative of the head of the hospital named Landesman, both of whom, according to several of the physicians, had only slight cases of short duration.

When time came for the inoculation Dr. Friedman produced a hypodermic syringe, which was at once objected to by the physicians of the clinic as so unclear as to be unfit for use. A syringe was produced from the hospital stock. Dr. Friedman took it in his hands before it was sterilized. A physician called his attention to this fact and Dr. Friedman explained that he was very nervous and thanked him for the caution.

The atmosphere of the clinic had become distinctly unfriendly by the time the third patient had been inoculated. Dr. Sirovich declared frankly to everybody who would listen to him that Dr. Friedman did not himself have confidence in his serum and was not sincere in his representations of its virtues.

ONE STEP FORWARD

The U. S. Congress has passed a law which prohibits the shipping of intoxicating liquors into a prohibition state. It was passed by both houses, went to the President, Mr. Taft, and he vetoed it. It then went back to Congress and was passed over the President's veto. We say hurrah for our Congress.

If the great commonwealth of a state, by a majority of its voters says we do not want intoxicating liquors sold in our state, we say the state ought to have the protection and co-operation of the U. S. government to help it to be decent. Instead of that, heretofore the government has rather aided the liquor men in helping to break down the law and make it hard for the would-be sober men to keep sober. Mr. Taft's excuse for vetoing the bill was that he thought it was unconstitutional. Perhaps Mr. Taft's Supreme Court Judges will declare the act unconstitutional and defeat the ends of justice after all.—Norfolk Call.

"Any mail for me?"

"Nope."

"Look into that pigeon hole again, Hiram. My wife expects a wash boiler in this mail."—Washington Herald.

The satisfaction we find in it (existance) will depend on what we bring to it, on the nature of the good we seek, on our views and expectations of life.—Dr. Hedge.

WEST GLENDALE

Mrs. May C. Frawley of Los Angeles was the guest last Thursday of Mrs. George R. Allen of 1418 West Fifth Street.

A new home for the West Glendale M. E. church is under consideration. It will be definitely decided next Wednesday night how the church will be designated in the future.

Residents near Fifth and Central have been much annoyed lately by the disappearance of their milk. Four families have reported that they had to go without their "mush and milk" for breakfast, and it is thought that others have also suffered losses. If the needy ones will please come forward and state their troubles no doubt a collection will be taken up to supply them with milk so that they need not borrow from their neighbors after dark.

Mr. and Mrs. Curl of Pasadena were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Elliott of 1453 Oak Street last Sunday.

A very interesting meeting was held last Wednesday night by Midadero Lodge, Knights of Pythias. It was voted to make use of the rooms soon to be vacated by the Glenarry Studio, for club and reading rooms. A rest room for ladies, the mothers, sisters and wives of the members will also be opened by the lodge. After the business meeting a social time was enjoyed by a number of the members.

The entertainment committee of the Carpenters' Union met last Thursday night at the home of Mr. E. S. Grant of 1468 Milford Street. The Homkraft Fair given last November by the Local was so successful that it is to be repeated. It will be held much on the same general plan, but a number of innovations are to be added. The Fair is to be held some time in April.

The Queen Esthers of the West Glendale M. E. church held their regular meeting at the home of Louise Brooks, 1555 Oak St. on Saturday, March 8. A very delightful afternoon was spent and after the business session a social hour was indulged in. Games of various kinds were played and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her mother. Plans were laid for an entertainment to be given in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Glover of Los Angeles were in Glendale Sunday visiting friends and former neighbors. Although very cozily located in the City they still have a soft spot in their hearts for their old home here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Pert had as their guests for the past week friends from Pomona. The trip was made by auto, and while here many pleasant trips around the country were enjoyed.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of the Remington school held a musical at the home of Mrs. Mary Gridley, corner Brand Boulevard and Milford St. on Thursday afternoon. An excellent program was given and a silver offering taken. At the beginning of the present term the mothers made quite a few improvements in the different rooms, going to the expense of about $35 or more. The proceeds of the afternoon went toward meeting these expenses. The following clippings are from the Express of March 10:

"A Denver newspaper man borrowed money enough on which to get married. That's about the only way any newspaper man could possibly get married." "We have often wondered if, when the pearly gates are opened and people pass in, St. Peter will have to raise his voice and shout, 'Move up there in front, plenty of room inside.' " "When poverty comes in at the door it never stops to wipe its feet." "However, the man who knows just how to manage a woman never tries it."

On Thursday evening, March 6, Carnation Rebekah Lodge No. 257 did something that they have not done before in the past three years and that was, to put on their own initiatory work. The work was performed in such a splendid manner and carried out so smoothly that all those present including East Gate Lodge of Highland Park, with District Deputy Effie Adams in charge, complimented them very highly and also spoke in glowing terms of the way in which the lodge is growing and of the good work in general.

The degree team were gowned in new robes and were presented by Mr. Raymond Foss with brass crowns. Mr. Foss also presented to the lodge an original electric design of the three links handsomely decorated in red, white and blue. Much credit is given Mr. Frank Booth for his efficient work and for the candles and holders and electric lights for the stage. The following four candidates were initiated and three other applications are in: Coral Griffith, Elizabeth Lange, William Farrar and Charles Shanahan. The degree team was composed of the following:

P. N. G. Roberto Rand.
N. G., Zada Sprinkle.
V. G., Martha Klamm.
Chaplain, Hortense Hunter.
R. S. N. G., Ethel Horlock.
L. S. N. G., Essie Booth.
R. S. V. G., Winnie Hartly.
L. S. V. G., Mary Foss.
Conductor, Ida Smith.
Warden, Mary Arbuthnot.
R. Alter Supporter, Eva Gilson.
L. Alter Supporter, Mattie Pierce.
Pianist, Louise Patterson.

Refreshments of coffee and cake were served at the close of the meeting. Carnation Lodge paid a visit recently to the Glendale Lodge, I. O. O. F., and during the evening treated the members to home-made cake,

Tropic

SCHOOL BOND ELECTION NOTICE

The Ladies Aid of the First Methodist church of Tropic enjoyed an all-day sewing bee in the parlors of the church Tuesday. The members of the society went early and staid late and a pleasant and profitable afternoon was the result.

Joseph Marple, who is tenor soloist at the First Methodist church of Los Angeles, was one of the soloists who took part in the sacred concert given by the Music Teachers association last Sunday afternoon in the Temple Auditorium. The soloists were supported by the large 45-piece orchestra known as the People's Orchestra, and Sunday afternoon's concert proved to be the finest affair of its kind held this year under the auspices of this association.

The building committee of the Tropic M. E. church is contemplating the erection of a new church at the corner of Palmer avenue and Central in the very near future, according to all reports. It is the proposition to situate the new church immediately in front of the present church building, the latter to be used as a Sunday school room and reception hall.

Rapid progress is being made in the brick business block at the corner of Park avenue and Brand boulevard. The structure will be a two story, two store room affair and it is expected that it will be ready for occupancy in about a month. Many people believe that the erection of this block will mean the starting of an "up town" business section in the city of Tropic. It is understood that another business structure will be erected on this corner before a great while.

Crushed rock, gravel, etc., are being dumped along Park avenue prior to the improvement of that thoroughfare. This street will be graded, will have a rock and oil surface and the sections of the street which have no sidewalk or curbing will be improved with this cement work. This work has been held up for a long time on account of one thing or another and now that things have been put in shape for the improvement the work will be rushed to completion.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hands this 4th day of March, 1913.

Mr. Hall occupies the large double room in the central part of the building with his very large stock of furniture and second hand goods. The west part of the block is occupied by the Glendale News, which was moved March 1st by the new management. The new location gives us space for the installing of new machinery and makes the office easy of access from either part of town.

In response to the clever invitations issued by the Bar Z boys, a large number of their friends gathered in the Knights of Pythias hall on Saturday evening where a pleasant evening of dancing was enjoyed. Striking and appropriate decorations made the hall a pretty scene. The ceiling was canopied with streamers of blue and gold, the Bar Z colors. The lights were prettily shaded by gaily colored Japanese lanterns while white pennants of every size and description adorned the walls.

Patronesses of the evening were: Mrs. R. H. Wells and Mrs. V. Snively. The Bar Z comprises Charles Wells, Tom Thornton, Arthur Knight, Vernon Snively, Frank Lytell, James Gibson, Louis Leppelman, Tom Richards, and Fred Farmer.

FRUIT GROWERS' DEPARTMENT

FARM DRAINAGE

There are in general three conditions of soil needing drainage: First, land which is wet and marshy because of lack of surface drainage; second, that which has so large an amount of organic matter and such heavy clay that water cannot well penetrate it; third, soil with heavy, compact clay subsoils and hardpans says C. P. Norgod in the California Farmer. Upon such subsoils, the attack of the air from above and beneath flowing drainage, and deep plowing or subsoiling, made possible by drainage, has a loosening and mellowing influence that nothing else can accomplish.

One of the most obvious results of drainage, from which all other benefits accrue, is in the removal of surplus water. Plants require moist soil, but cannot grow in a saturated soil where roots come in contact with standing water below the water table. Plants obtain their moisture almost entirely from capillary water, that is, the water which is held in the small opening between soil grains as oil in a wick. Since capillary water is only available in the unsaturated soil above the water table, drainage, by lowering the water table, makes room for more capillary water, thus increasing the supply of water available to plant roots, and making possible the storage of large quantities of moisture during a wet season against the time of droughts. With drainage comes also the more favorable condition for the formation of mulches and consequent prevention of waste of moisture by surface evaporation.

By the downward percolation of water toward the drains, the plant food, of the fine surface soil and the manures, is carried downward to become thoroughly incorporated in the soil, rather than to be washed away by surface overflow. Moreover, the deepening of the soil increases its capacity for water, and prevents the overflow which washes away the saturated, muddy top soil.

Vegetation can use only plant food of finely powdered soil easily soluble in water. The passage of air and heat into and through the soil, made possible by the removal of the standing water, and the interchange of air through the soil between bodies of air in the soil and the air above the soil, disintegrates the soil particles hitherto unavailable to plants, and produces that fine, crumbling, workable condition of the soil known as fine texture, in which is found the maximum amount of soluble plant food and the most favorable conditions of plant growth. The toughest clay soils are in this way made friable, responding with increased crops.

The increase of heat and air provides favorable conditions for the increase in the numbers and activity of bacteria, the minute plants whose function it is to set free plant food and change the form of the constituents of soil into food for plants. Moreover, the constant passage of surface water into soil carries in chemicals which act vigorously to set free plant food bound in various chemical combinations.

Since it is very difficult to heat water from above a water-soaked soil is very slow to become warm in the spring; but well-drained soil, like a metal, is easily and quickly heated in the spring, hence is an early soil! The growth and extension of root systems as instruments for obtaining nourishment for the later growth of the upper part of the plant must take place during a certain definite period previous to top development. This period and consequent root development is shortened by cold, late plant bed in the spring, but increased by a warm, early soil, hence the removal of water by drainage, by permitting an early rapid heating of the soil, insures a vigorous root system to supply abundant nourishment later for the growth of the top.

The development of the root systems is further helped by the lowering of the water table. Roots cannot grow below the water table. Lowering the water table permits a deeper root development and consequently more root surface in contact with and in position to take in the plant food.

It will thus appear evident that many of our apparently dead, worthless lands, are so because of lack of drainage, and that drainage can unlock the fertility of these dead soils and make them alive, warm and fertile.

The deeper the drains are placed the lower do they make the water table with a given distance between drains. Drains do not lower the water table to the same level at all points. Close to the drains it is lowered to the depth of the drain, whereas at the point midway between drains it may be several inches or even feet higher, depending upon the openness and permeability of the soil to water. The water table is thus formed into a series of curves, the end of each at the level of the drain and the crest approaching the surface of the soil. Therefore the deeper the drains the farther apart may they be placed without danger of bringing the crest of the water table too near the surface.

Four feet is considered deep drainage, three feet medium, and two and one-half feet shallow drainage. In general three feet is a safe distance of standardization worked out for the government which give to future generations data covering the causes, extent and effects of forest fires, far more complete and accurate than records kept heretofore.

While statistics are not sufficient to complete to justify a positive statement of the actual depletion of our forest resources through fire, they are more than sufficient to prove that this loss is truly appalling. In round figures, the land area of the United States is 1900 million acres, of which only about two-fifths is forested. Three-fourths of the original stand has been culled or cut, and the present rate of destruction is about three times that of the growth. At present the stand is about 2200 billion board feet. The annual cut is about 100 billion board feet, and the loss from fire, covering 10 million acres, varies according to whether the greater areas are virgin forest, cut lands, or returns. We are prodigal of our heritage, both principal and interest. We cut each year 3½ per cent of the stand and burn almost all if not all of the young growth.

SLANG AS A COLLEGE PRODUCT

"Speaking of culture as a legitimate college product, I am reminded of the story of a clergyman and his wife who were attending the commencement exercises at a certain college for girls.

"I approve of higher education for women," said the divine with greatunction, "because of the refinement the culture, it inevitably fosters in the minds of our young women, and which is so manifest today in all the exercises." Just then a sweet girl graduate came rushing across the campus, waving her diploma frantically aloft, and crying in a shrill voice, "Through, by gosh!" —Suburban life.

She—Oh, Jack, I'm awfully glad you proposed.

He—Then you accept me?

She—Well, no; but you see, your proposal puts me even with Kitty Cobb, who had the most of any girl in our set.—Boston Transcript.

Woman—How did you get that Carnegie medal?

Tramp—Heroism, lady. I took it away from a guy that was twice my size.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

LIVED WELL AT SMALL COST

Conversation in a restaurant between several diners was on the cost of living. An aged, patriarchal-looking man broke into the conversation and told some of his experiences:

"If I live until the last day of September I will be 92 years old. I might not look it, but it's a fact, all right, for I was born in Philadelphia in 1820. My father was what they called a sheep butcher, and I have known him to come home bragging to mother of having sold his mutton for 6½ cents a pound."

"We used to get the best cuts of beef for a levy a pound. Turnips went begging at 20 cents a bushel. Pork was as cheap as mutton, and fish brought about 4 cents a pound. Flour was sold by the hundred-weight at about $1.50."

"We owned our own house, a three-story brick with a big yard. Neighbors renting similar houses paid $12 a month rent, and thought they were being robbed. Coal could be had for $4 a ton. Butter of the best variety cost from 12 to 16 cents a pound. Cigars which now cost a dime are no better than the old 'sixers' we paid a cent for, and I have never smoked a 5-centner that was as good as the old-time 'Spanish' which we bought two for a cent."

"A laboring man worked for $1 a day and lived well. The civil war brought a great change in the cost of living. Prior to the war there was a marked distinction between the rich and the poor. The latter included all the classes, but the wealthy were told by the clothes they wore."

"As long as the people have high tastes, things are going to command high prices. This demand of people-booms prices.—Philadelphia Record."

Tropico

Lavina L. Cushing, through whose property the proposed street would run, has filed a protest with the city trustees, stating her reasons for not wanting the street opened, these being that no necessity for such opening now exists and that it would greatly damage her property. The trustees have stated that up to this time no official request has been made for the opening of this street and until it is made, the board will do nothing in the matter.

This city has placed an order with the Los Angeles Rubber Company for four-inch fire hose at a cost of 85 cents per foot. It is believed that the hose offered by this company in the recent bids fit the needs of this city better than any other. Slowly but surely Tropico is adding to her fire fighting apparatus.

Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Lunn of Glendale avenue celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home a few days ago. They came to California 23 years ago from Michigan and located in Irwindale, Azusa valley. Only relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Lunn attended the affair.

GRISWOLD ADVOCATES MORE SCHOOL ROOM

Dwight Griswold, one of the leading residents of this place, and others are making a cry to the residents of this place for more room in which to educate the children of this place. "At the present time," states Mr. Griswold, "the Tropico school is filled to its capacity and if the attendance continues to grow during the remainder of the term as it has during the past few months the building and facilities will be altogether inadequate. We need more room and need it badly. This is a vital question and I believe it will take at least $25,000 to erect a sufficiently large building to accommodate the children that will enroll before the opening of next school term."

Mr. Griswold is versed in this school problem and knows of what he speaks. For years he has been prominent in school matters.

WE WERE ONLY "TEASIN'

Justice George C. Melrose, recorder of the city of Tropico, has taken offense at a little jest appearing under the heading of "Tropico Items," in this paper, this being in connection with the case of "People vs. Garnett of Lankershim." We can assure Melrose that when we stated that Garnett should have been fined $50 instead of $25 and made to pay the fine immediately, it was written simply as a jest. We can also assure the recorder of our sister city that from our observations as to his rulings during the past few years we have nothing but praise for his unerring judgment and for his indiscriminating manner of passing out bundles of justice. If the judge has any favorites among those taken before him no one would ever know it from the way he handles them. Don't be peeved, brother, we were only "teasin'"

TROPICO GIRL WEDS

Miss Ida Boyd, who for the past several months has been living at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Biggs of North Central avenue, this city, was married Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock to J. C. Hall, a progressive rancher of Ontario. The wedding took place at the residence of the Methodist preacher at Ontario, where Mr. and Mrs. Hall will reside on the large ranch now owned by the groom. Miss Hall is favorably known in this city and according to all reports we believe she is wise to take up the position of "servin' the eats," on the Ontario farm. The best wishes of this paper and a large number of friends attend the young couple in their new undertaking.

THROW HAT IN RING

In regard to paying the water company $15 to make connections at this place, the residents of Tropico and the board of trustees in particular are highly indignant. And to back up this indignation the board has decided to see what can be done to make the company be reasonable. In this direction Chairman Bancroft of the board has been authorized to petition the state railroad commission to see if this body will not help the residents out of this trouble. To the last ditch the city will fight this matter, claiming that all it wants is a square deal, not wishing to set anyone up in business, especially a company which has thousands of dollars behind it. Tropico's hat is in the ring.

TROPICO WANTS RESTING PLACES

The matter of public parks for this city is a proposition which is being vigorously discussed at this time by local residents. C. T. Van Etan, J. Herbert Smith and Harry L. Edwards have been appointed a committee to advise ways and means of securing a park and to investigate the matter thoroughly. The Tropico Civic club and other local bodies have taken the matter up and are promoting the idea. The residents realize that it is not wise to let the matter of furnishing a resting and in the evening he was pretty well under the weather, and was so badly intoxicated that he could hardly talk. After giving the injured fellow some wearing apparel Mr. Branson took him in until other assistance could be secured. The police of Los Angeles were immediately notified and half a dozen "coppers" arrived on the scene in about half an hour, the trip from Los Angeles being made by auto.

INDEPENDENT LUMBER CO. (INC.)

On Salt Lake Tracks

A search of the nearby country was made but no trace of the attacking party or parties could be found. Noticing that Mathews' injuries were not really serious the police bundled him into the automobile and hurried him to Los Angeles, where his wounds were dressed and he was allowed to rest quietly during the remainder of the night in the "Cooler."

The theory entertained by the police is that Mathews had been drinking with companions and just after dusk a quarrel arose in which the injured man received a large helping. The injured man is employed at the Tile factory at this place and for a time had been a boarder at the Branson home. For the past week or so he has been "batching it" in the old factory building on Park avenue, east of the S. P. tracks.

Initial Offering of Stock in the Monarch Investment Company

A Limited Allotment to be Sold at 50c per Share

The Same Price Paid by the Original Organizers

In A Nut-Shell

We're organized to engage in home building and sub-dividing—to develop industrial cities—to deal in leases on business properties—to build all classes of structures and to engage in a general real estate business in all its branches.

We're capitalized at $1,000,000—par value $1.00 per share.

$60,000 worth of our stock has already been subscribed at 50c per share—exactly the same price at which it's offered you. No one has paid less.

Absolute security is assured—your money goes into the soundest security on earth—houses and lots—gilt-edge Los Angeles real estate.

The personelle of our management simply guarantees success. Study the names—they need no introduction.

Not a dollar of promotion stock has been issued—not a dollar has been paid in commissions for the sale of stock.

Although just organized, we own 20 lots on 88th street—have 5 bungalows under construction.

Now, Mr. Investor, let's study the evidence—take it point by point and draw a logical conclusion. Our line of business means that we directly profit by the growth of Los Angeles. Scores of companies have made good in this field, and their stockholders have made fortunes from their original investments.

If you believe in Los Angeles' future you must believe in the future of a well-managed building company. And any man who doubts the future of Los Angeles must doubt the evidence of his senses.

But merely because there are fortunes to be made in this field doesn't mean necessarily that anyone can make them. The plan of operation must be right—the men in charge must be able. Study our plan—$60,000 worth of stock subscribed before we drove a nail—there's conservative management. Not a dollar of promotion stock issued—there's a pretty square deal.

As for the men behind us: note the names. Mr. C. B. Cunningham, one of our directors, has built scores of houses right here in Glendale. Men of this caliber simply compel success.

We've just begun operations. Right now is the time to join us. This stock will soon advance in price. It's only a matter of days. Don't wait until you have to pay 75¢ or $1.00 per share. Buy now at 50c. Write for our free booklet—better still—tear out the accompanying blank—fill out and mail, enclosing cheque or money order.
